

Jack Causey - For forty years I served as an associate pastor or pastor of four Baptist congregations in North or South Carolina. Before my retirement in 2000, I collaborated with the Center for Congregational Health, where I learned, among many things, about coaching. Having now received extensive training in the field of coaching, I have coached young ministers as they entered their first place of full time ministry, experienced ministers who have been dealing with congregational issues, and ministers who are planning to retire soon. In addition, I have been called on to coach search committees as well as congregations in the interim period.
